Soft Landscapes by Marco Piva

On sheets of white paper, playing with strokes and colours, I painted with tempera, watercolour and oil, a mix of colours and weaves, thus creating vibrant textures of lines and dots, transparency and opacity, luminosity and intensely coloured areas. Imaginary places and spaces were returning to my memory, maybe they were real places, natural or artificial landscapes, cities, transformed by a graphic gesture into new, abstract territories.

Then I met ege® and realised that those drawings could interpret the territories which were the arenas for actions and adventures of living, homes, hotels, places of entertainment, work, and communication. Territories with soft, gentle and amicable floors, where textile flooring, carpeting and rugs play a role of visual, tactile and emotional pleasure.

So it was then that I started working on a collection of designs that, starting from my freehand pictorial "divertissements", interpreted, in a new and dynamic way, the theme of injection dyed textile flooring, abandoning the traditional decorations, graphic biases and stylistic paradigms that, also because of the many application requirements in contemporary architecture, were by then the normal rule. I moved a long way away from the territory of applied decoration to venture into the uncharted territory of pure imagination where material, colours, and textures form an integral part of interiors conceived as space.

The original hand-painted designs were then re-elaborated and calibrated via the filter of computer graphics. They were multiplied, mirrored and modified in a new, vast and complex scenario, where the original weaves and colours gradually took on new dimensions and intensity.

This was how new landscapes were born, SOFT LANDSCAPES, unusual places drawn in different scales, intensified or rarified, which have the colours and shades of places visited in various parts of the world, regenerated by my memory: hot and African, brilliant and Mediterranean, delicate and romantically Middle-European, cold and with Nordic moderation, also transformed into a metropolitan context.

Red Flight

As if flying, a territory of tiny artificial fields appears below me, and a mysterious figure, crystallised on a street in Fez, crosses them in a secretive manner. The colour red dominates the scene, it is dark and deep, then as brilliant as a ruby, and then yet again softly shaded, almost transparent.

Orange Dream

In the dream large wells of coloured water appear under the hot, intense sun. Everything seems pleasingly full and calm.

The orange colour vibrates on the surfaces, conveying a stimulating and energising sensation.

Yellow Ray

Suddenly, on the edge of the track perched on the highlands, a ray of light, almost a flash of lightning, illuminates a dense cloud of tiny flowers with an absolute yellow, and the scene changes into a strange dilation of spaces and colours in supreme silence, just before the rain returns.

Green Shade

Green is the perfection of Nature in its uncontaminated randomness, but it is also the regular pattern of cultivated fields constantly featuring different geometries. Green is the serene life that multiplies and repeats itself. It is the feeling of calm, the wind's delicate breath on grass, and the depth of shadowy and mysterious spaces as the sun goes down among the hills and mountains.

Blue Touch

It was summer, with the sea brushed by low, swift waves. A sail tried to pursue the white clouds reflected in the water.

The mountains in the background were almost purple. A touch of blue, as profound as an intense vibration, pervaded the entire space.

Grey Light

Via the windows of buildings, trains and cars, via the windows of the aeroplane returning to our cities, via our thoughts, geometrically composted in rational minds, the grey light seems to give a dimension and depth to a world that would otherwise be impossible. Grey light is the other light, the one that is the antithesis of our real nature, but which nevertheless exists.
